Clarification of Outside Consulting, Remunerated Scholarship, and the One-Sixth Rule

The campus policy regarding consulting activities is derived from Action of the Regents 8/14/44, amended 6/12/48. It was elaborated by the Boulder Faculty Assembly "Policy on Remuneration and Professional Service" which was accepted by the Chancellor in 1980. These documents are described in the On-line Desk Reference. This document explains these policies and interprets them in the context of the professional activities and expectations of the Boulder Campus faculty..

Why are consulting activities desirable? Consultation work has long been recognized by the Regents as a desirable and legitimate function that serves to keep the faculty in contact with the contemporary problems of their professions and, in consequence, should be encouraged. Such activities inform faculty teaching, and

For what types of activities should prior approval be sought? Any activity for which remuneration is received, except for those activities described below, should be reported, and any remunerated activity
